Infrastructure & Operations for a Flourishing Creative Economy

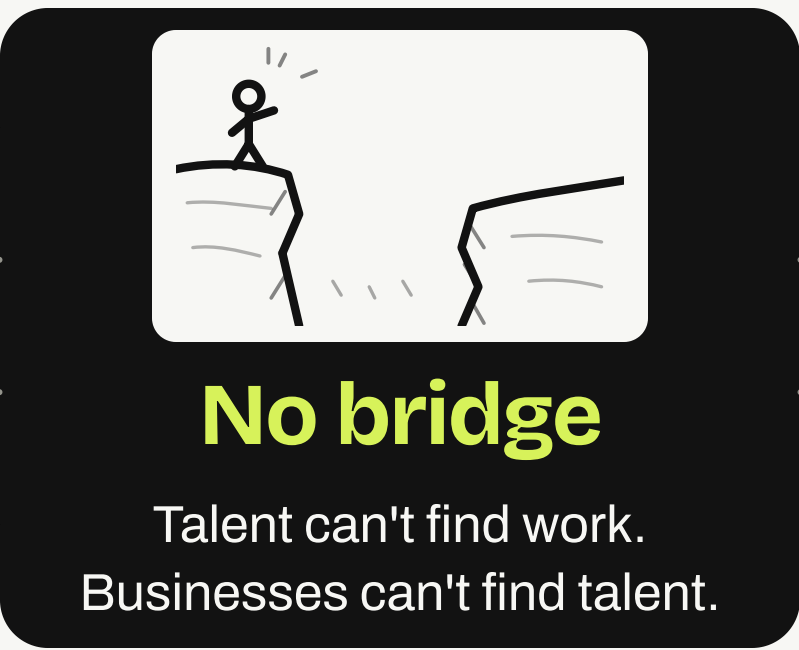

Rewiring the economics of creative work. In the age of AI, that matters even more.

THE PROBLEM • BEFORE

Working creatives here are isolated and underpaid, and the organizations that support them run on rented tools taped together.

CREATIVES

- Isolated
No table, no peers, nobody asking.
- Underpaid
Three jobs, and the creative work is the one that doesn't pay.
- Posting into the void
Instagram, hoping to be noticed.
- Not worthy
The story they start to believe.

BUSINESSES AND ORGANIZATIONS

- Tools taped together
Three or four rented tools, none built for this work.
- Can't find local talent
No trusted way to find, vet and pay creatives.
- Empty rooms
Slow nights, and nothing to draw people in.
- Sponsorship with no return
Sponsors can't see what it did.

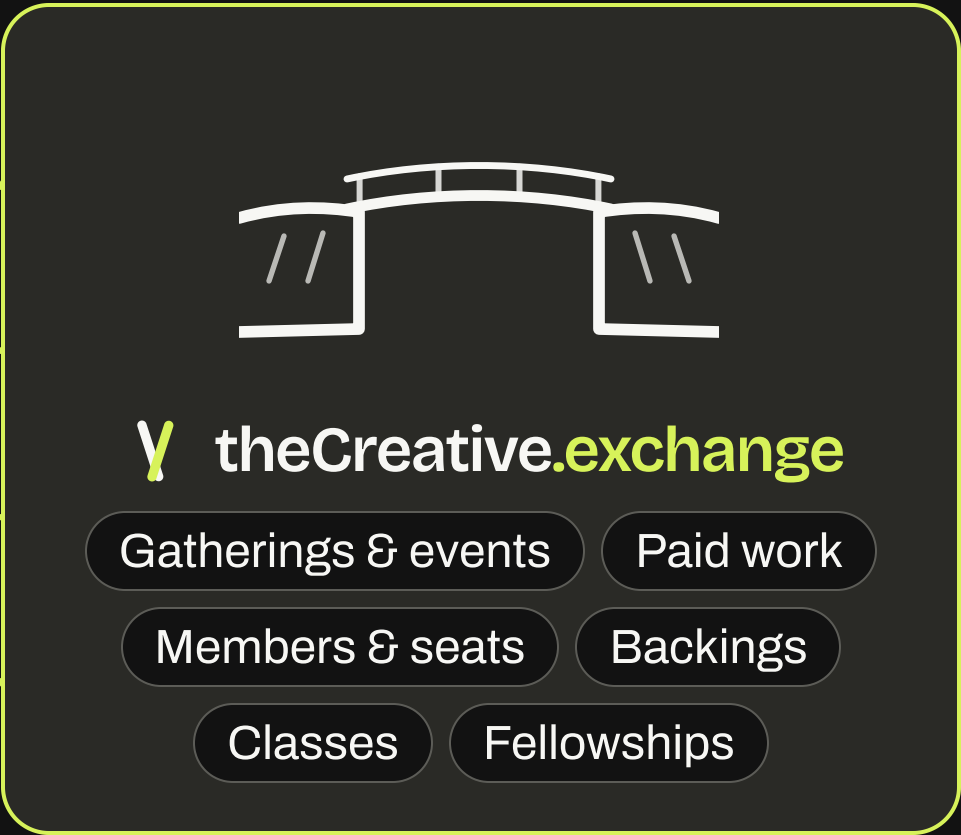

Arts funding is tight.
San Diego creatives leave or stop making work.

THE SOLUTION • AFTER

We enable creative communities to support themselves and step up to their opportunities.

CREATIVES

- Belonging
A community that knows your name, in person and online.
- Paid
Paid work with the pay stated up front; 90% of every backing.
- Seen
A portfolio, an audience, work that shows up in the city.
- Worthy
Fellowships that buy time, and peers who ask.

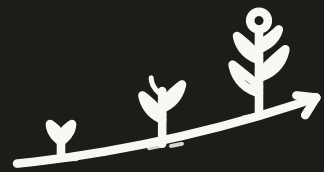

BUSINESSES AND ORGANIZATIONS

- One platform
Gatherings, seats, paid work and backing in one place.
- Local talent, vetted
Find, book and pay creatives who are known here.
- Full rooms
Events and classes that draw people in.
- Sponsorship you can see
Outcomes in the six-month impact report.

Flourishing is three things you can measure in a person's life.

FINANCIAL

Greater opportunities and dignity of work

Paid work with the pay stated up front. Backings where 90% reaches them. Fellowships that buy time.

SOCIAL AND EMOTIONAL

Belonging

A community that knows your name, in person and online. Rooms led by their own people, so the room looks like the city.

CULTURAL

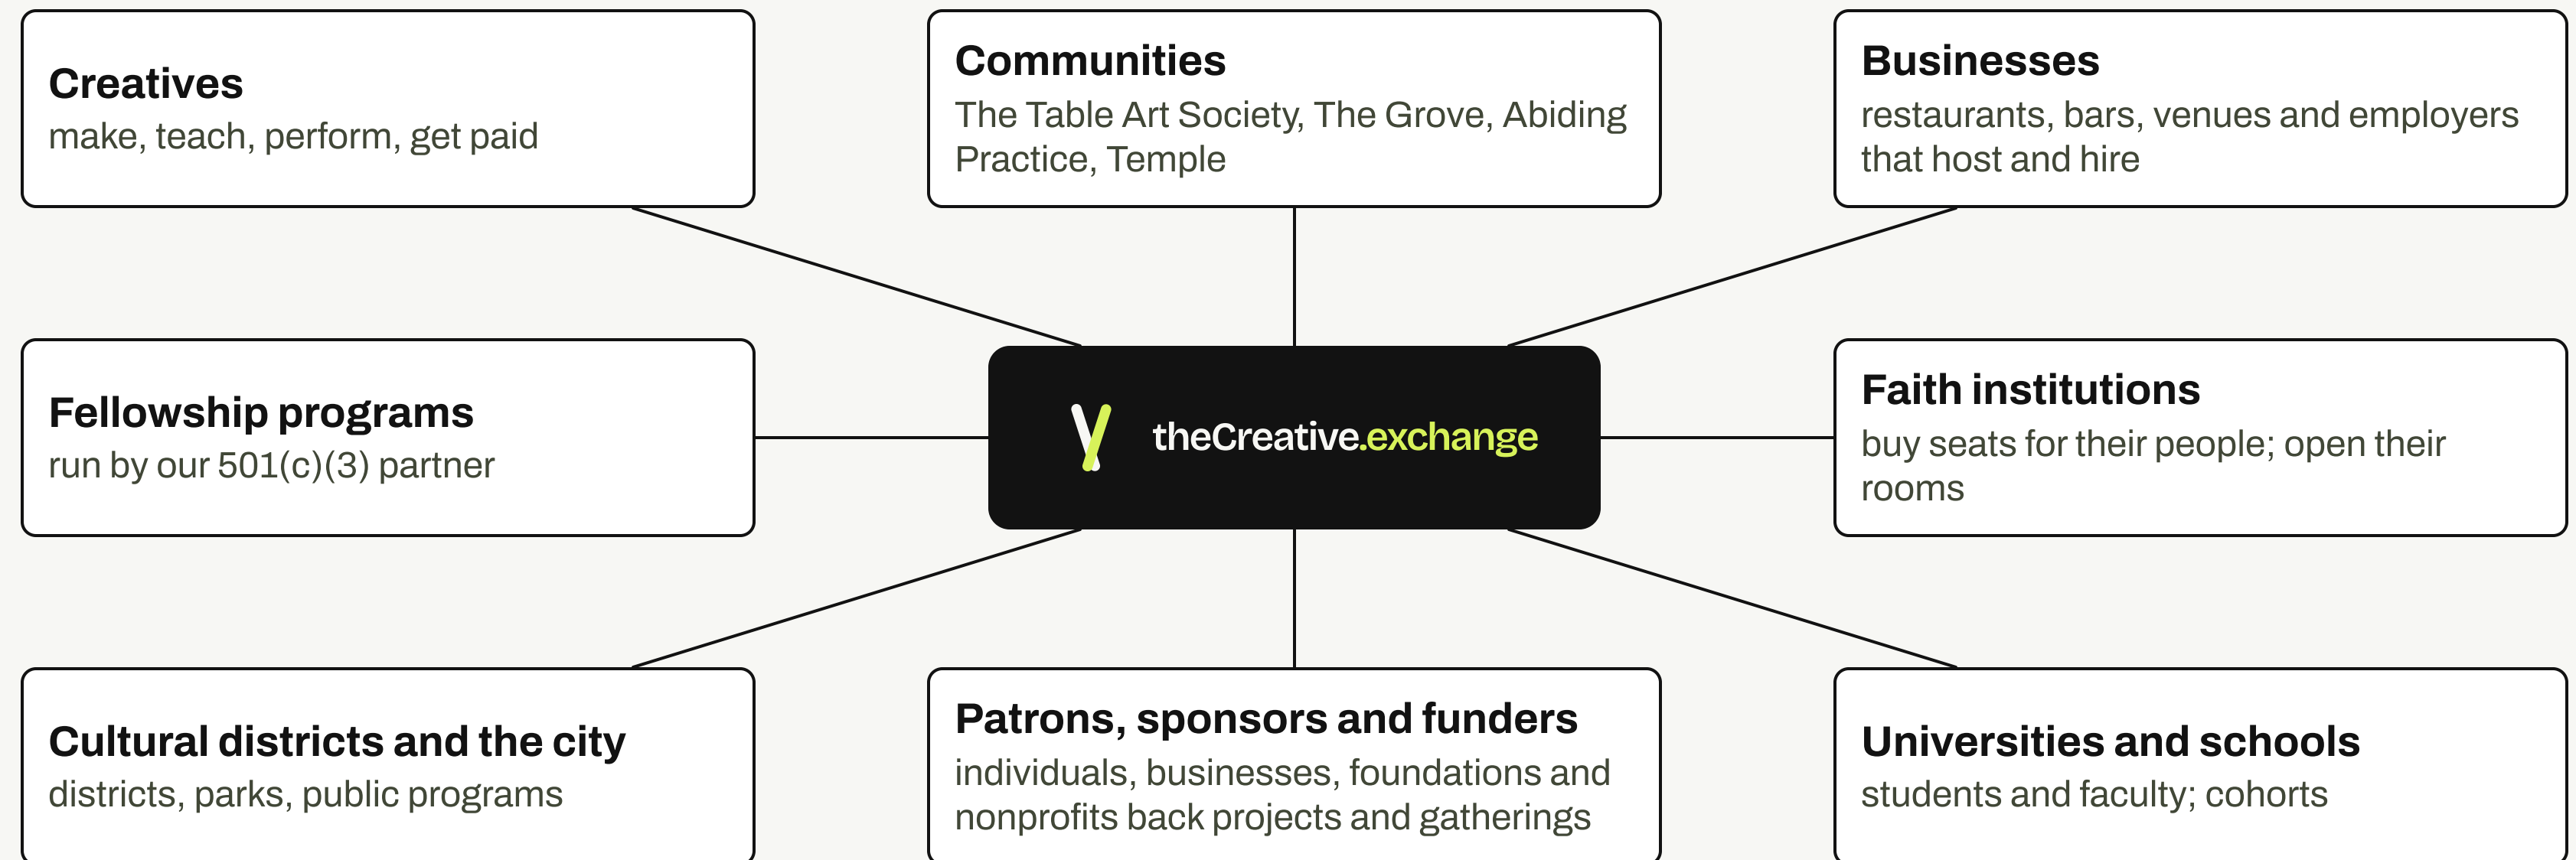

Agency

They own the portfolio, the audience and the work, and it shows up in the city: stages, walls, screens, places of work.

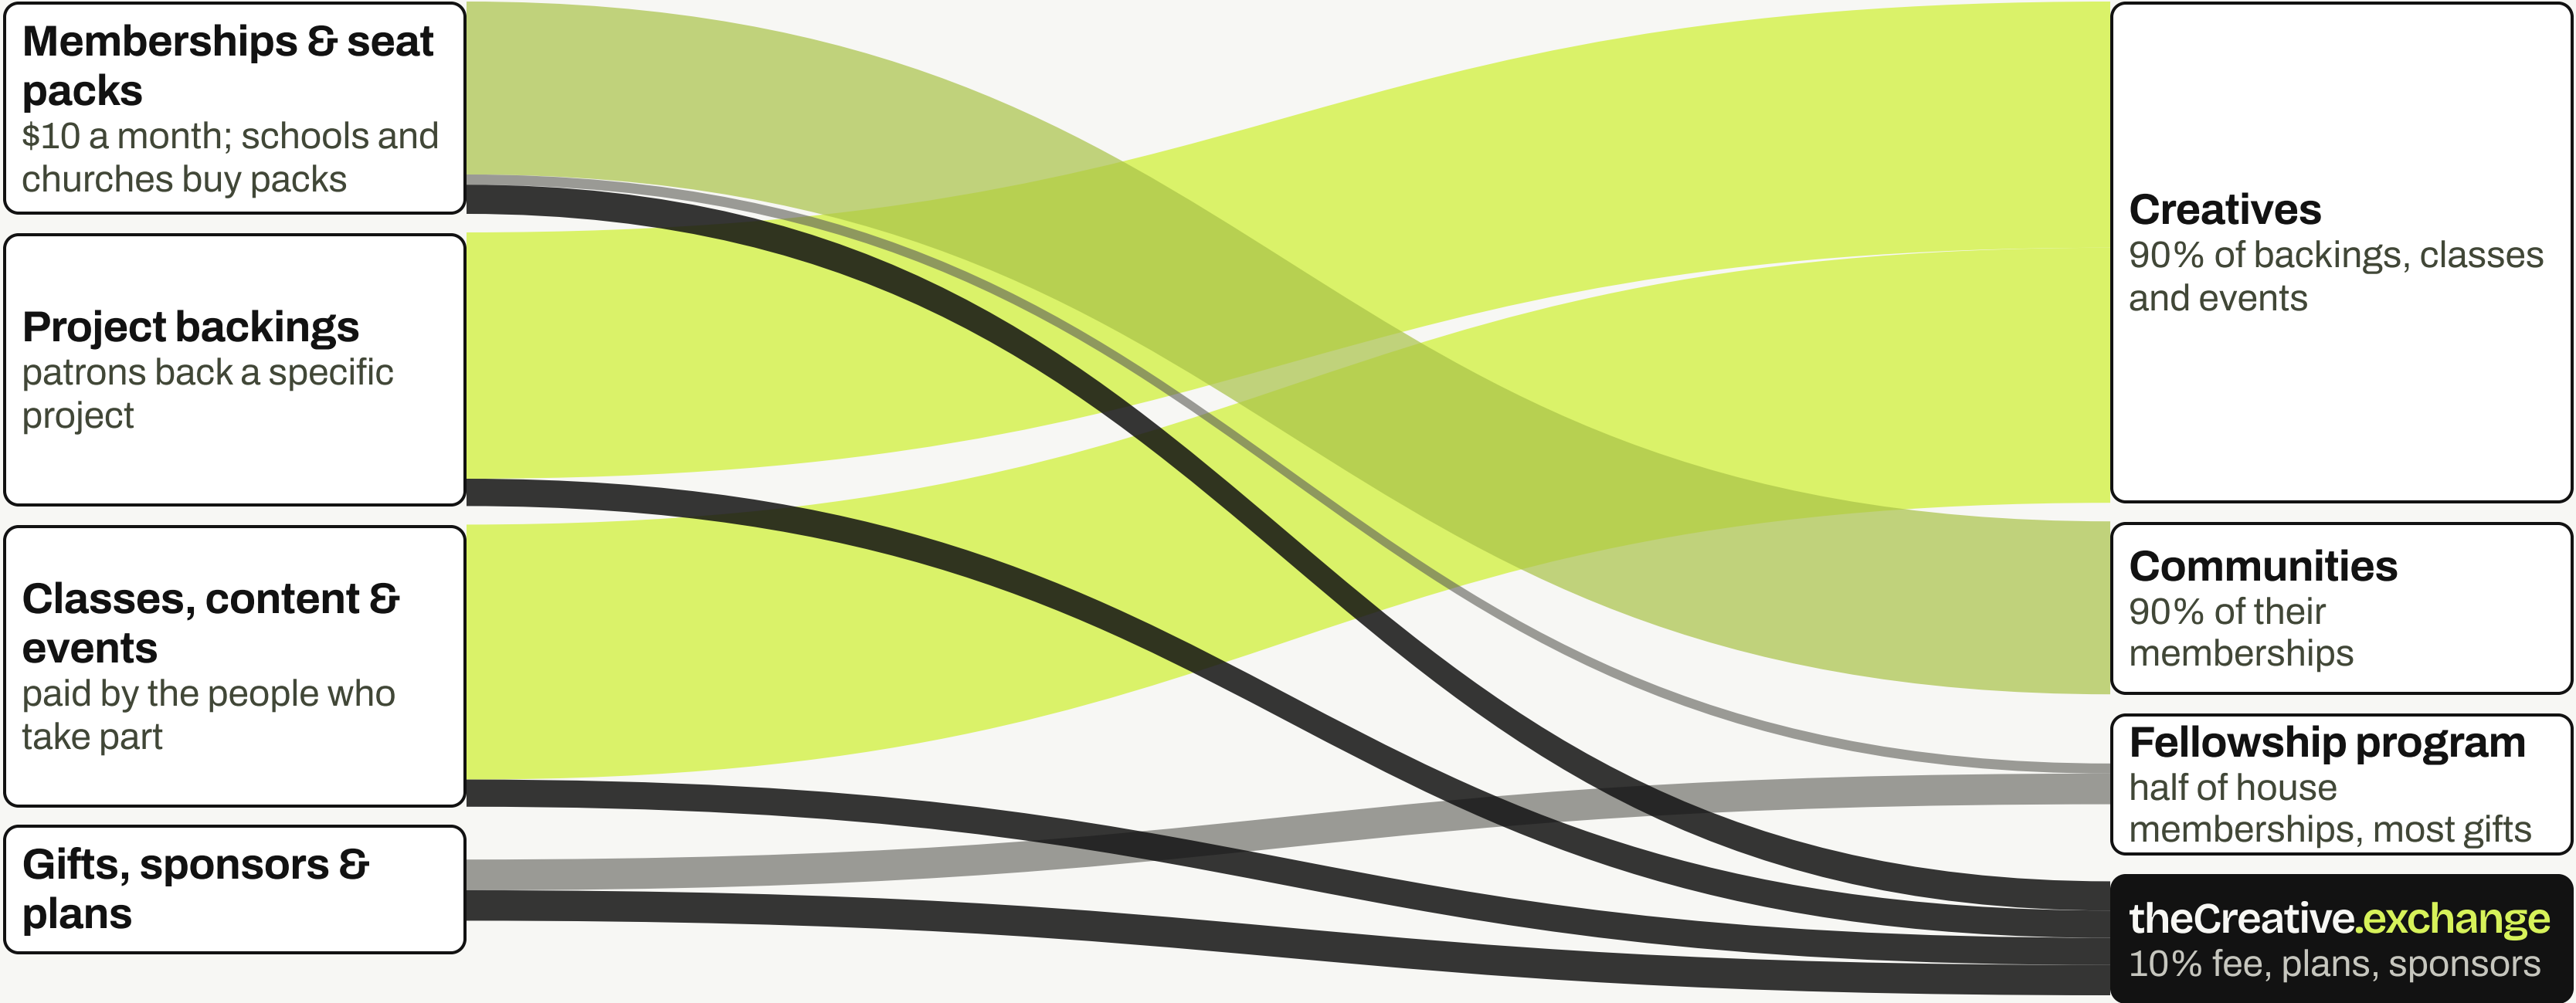

WHO IT SERVES

The infrastructure and engine for the arts and business in a city.

Better circulation of money: community wealth that starts with creatives, the people.

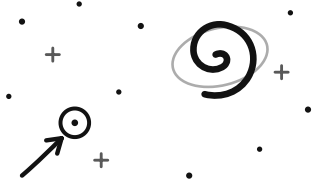

Multiple commerce streams.

Gifts to the fellowship program go to our 501(c)(3) partner and are reported separately from company revenue.

MARKET

Millions of creatives. We start with 35,000, then franchise city by city.

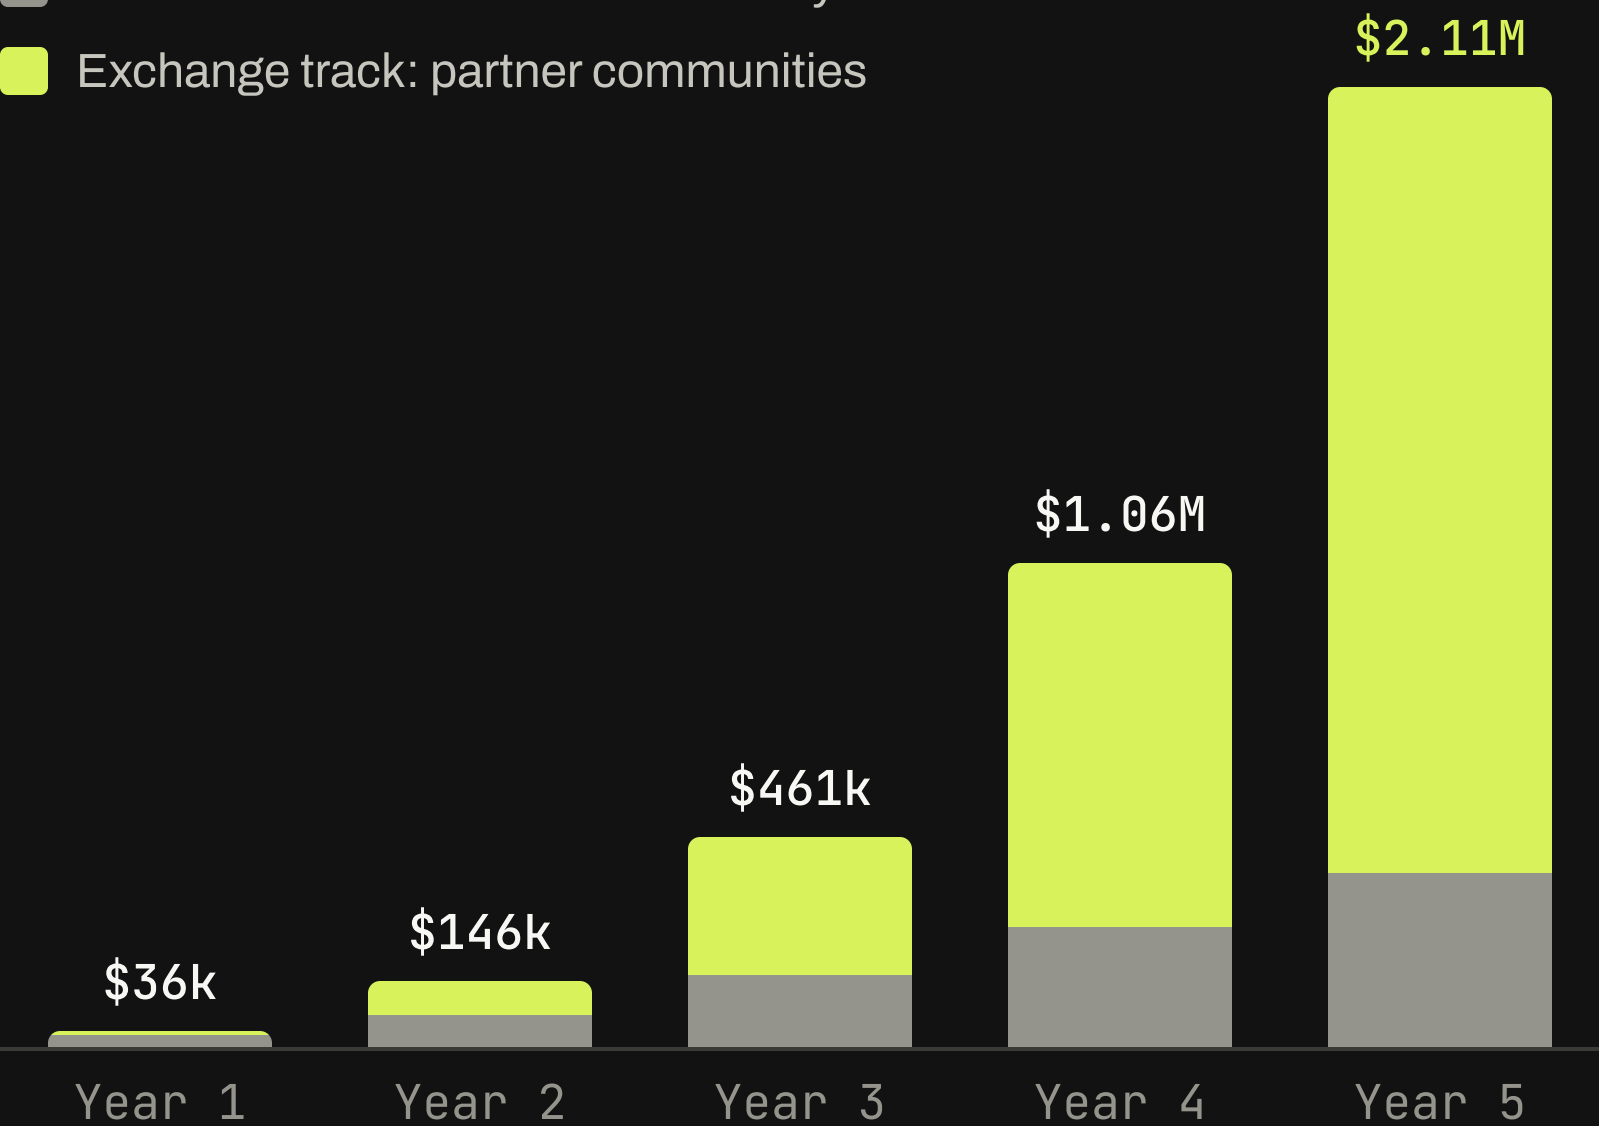

TAM	4 to 5 million	US creatives who work for pay, plus the people who make music, film and design in 373,000 churches
SAM	About 675,000	creatives in San Diego and nine franchise metros: Los Angeles, Nashville, Las Vegas, Austin, Atlanta, Dallas–Fort Worth, Phoenix, Denver, Seattle
BEACHHEAD	35,000	San Diego: working creatives, church creatives and the national networks we have mapped
SOM	5,000–10,000	members in three years: at least 3,000 paying individuals, the rest seats bought by organizations

A franchise metro is a community run by its own people on our infrastructure. Organizations buying seats: about 20% of revenue.

THE BUSINESS

Two tracks. $2.1M revenue and breakeven in year four, on today's prices.

- Garden track: our house community
- Exchange track: partner communities

Earned revenue: a 10% share of money moved, so we don't compete with nonprofits for grants

Seats and plans: churches, organizations and communities pay for the platform

Sponsorships and program fees

Base case, 20 metros • funded case: $1.4M in year three, $9.3M in year five, profitable in year four

WHERE IT STANDS

Soft-launched September 28. Kickoff November 6.

30

creatives enrolled on the waitlist in the first days.

communities live, with partner organizations:

The Table Art Society, The Grove, Abiding Practice, Temple

Nov 6

Kickoff in the Christian arts community: "The Creative Economy We All Need" at Lightchurch, Encinitas.

Funded work on stage, backing from your phone in the room, a benefit for the fellowship program.

Live now: profiles, projects, paid work, events, communities, classes, covered seats, backing checkout.

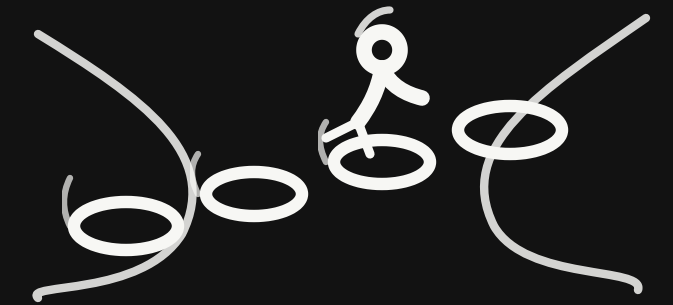

Proven demand: The Table Art Society has run this ecosystem model since 2019, with 91 cohort creatives and about 4,800 people reached a year.

How we validate impact, every six months.

Outcome	What we count	Validated at 18 months
Creatives	Dollars paid to creatives · creatives paid · creative income, before and after	1,000 active growing 3x a year to 5,000+ by year three creatives who earn report 10%+ more income
Belonging	Active members · retention · belonging survey, before and after	90% net revenue retention · belonging score up from baseline
Diversity and agency	Who leads and who gets paid, by discipline and neighborhood	Baseline set in the first report, then tracked
Local economy	Business-owner survey · dollars transacted with local businesses through the exchange	Baseline set, then growing

THE ASK

$350,000 pre-seed. First close $150k.

It funds

Both founders full time and paid from the first close, part-time marketing and community help, the first two franchise metros, the film series and the 2027 launches: 18 months of runway.

It proves

Twelve communities, two metros and 1,000 paying individuals at 18 months; 5,000+ paying by year three; impact report every six months.

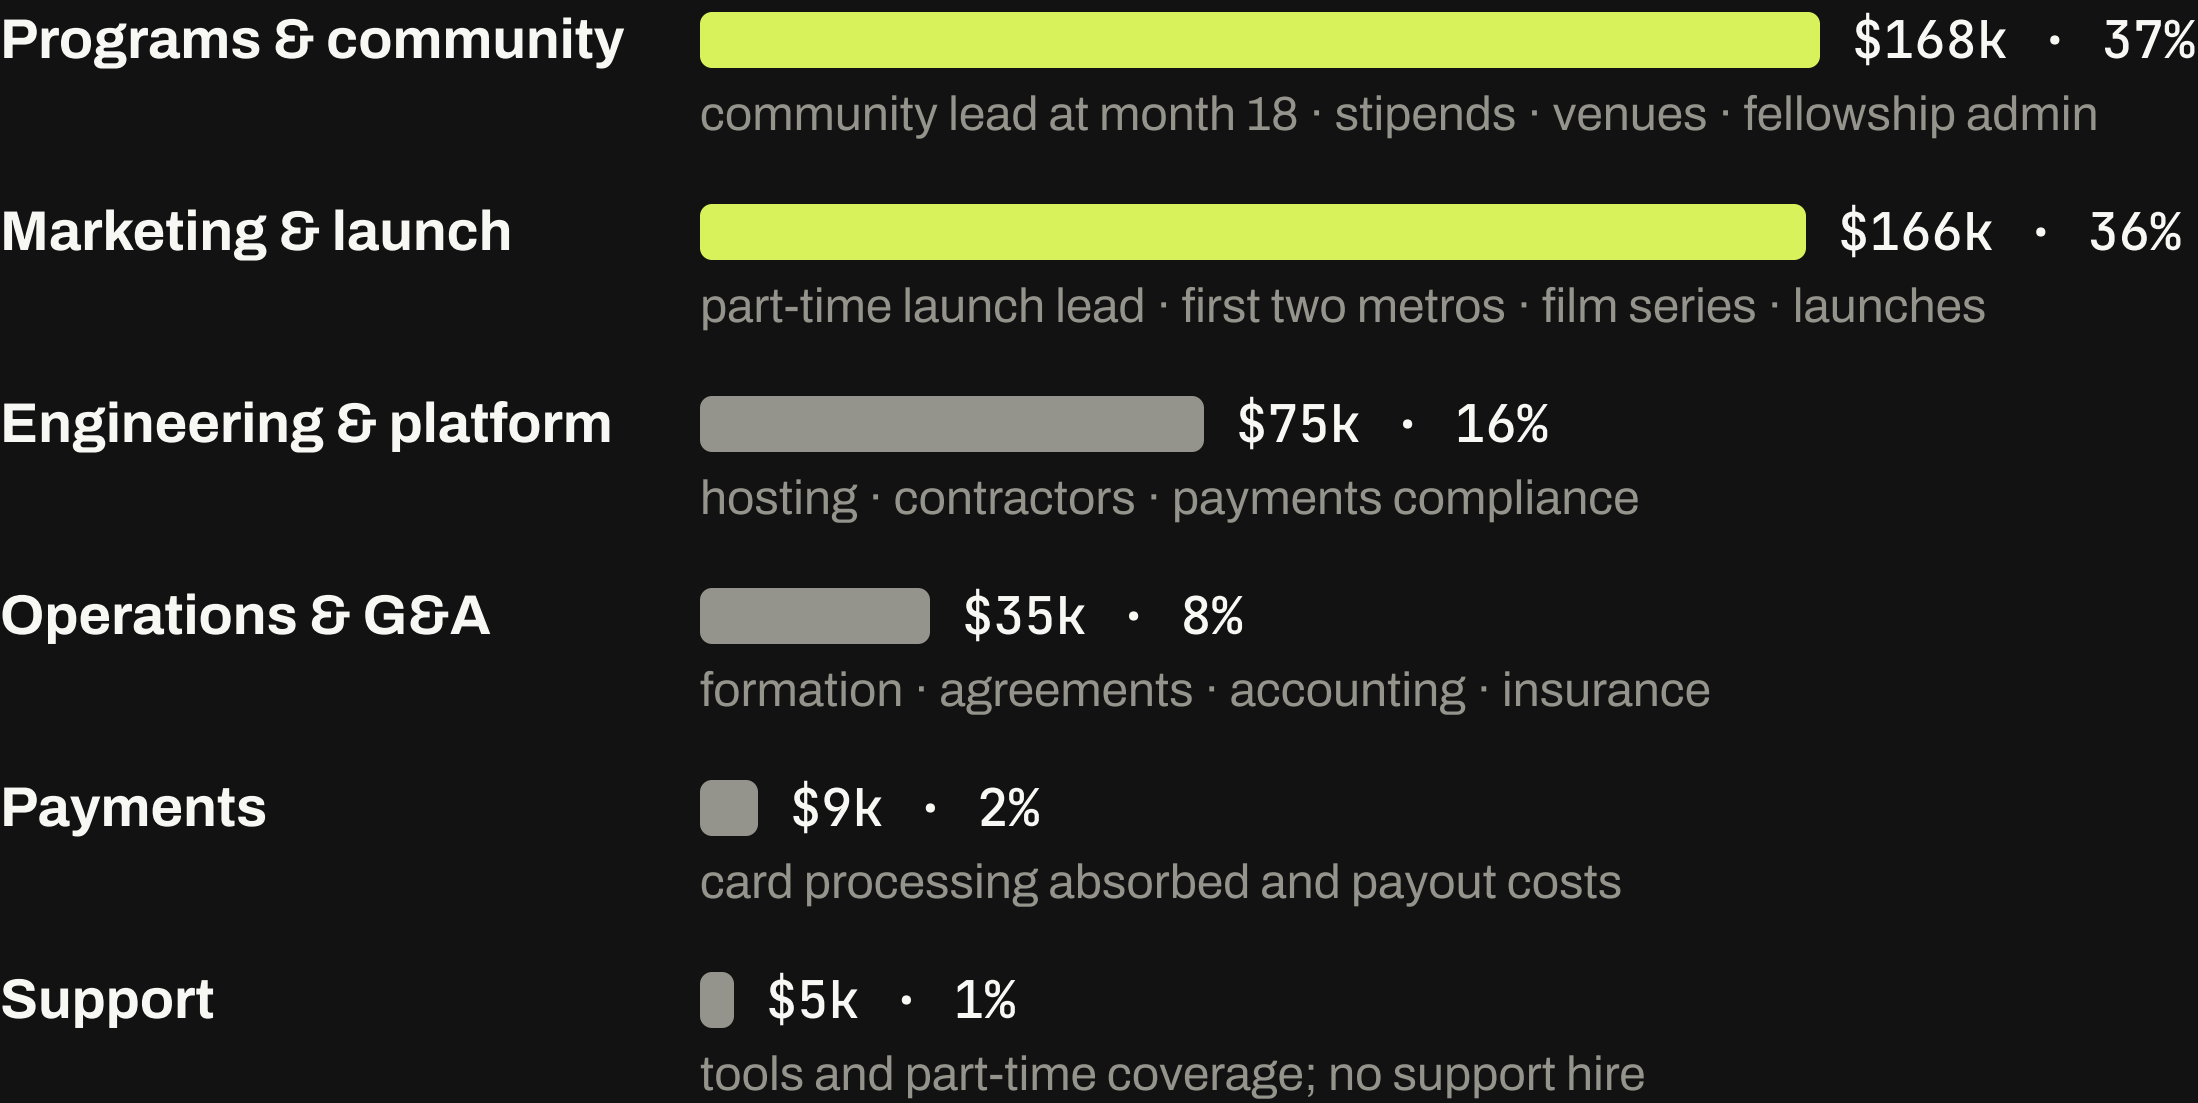

Alongside

A program grant to our 501(c)(3) partner, seat packs from churches and organizations, a community round.

Post-money SAFEs · Delaware C-corp formed before the first check · rolling closes to $350k · seed at 18 months

USE OF FUNDS

Eighteen months: where the money goes.

18-MONTH WINDOW

$458k spend

$109k revenue

$348k net cash need

18 months of runway on $350k

Two founders, full time from the first close, sit inside the functions they work in. Part-time marketing and community help; first full-time hire at month 18. November 6 is paid from current cash.
